If your child gets invited to play on a new team, ask the coach if it would be OK for you and your child to sit in and observe one of the practices. This way you and your child will get a good window into the team's culture before you decide whether or not it's a good fit.

Many times kids want to play a sport because their peers play that sport. In reality they really do not know if they like the sport until they watch it! Avoid frustration and give them the opportunity to observe.
